as im sure kevin is aware, the photos of the mountains representing the stock market, a new version of mandelbrots fractal photos. he has picked up on the algo trading, but refered to it as the algorithms of physics, he then showed swarming behavior. those are more biological decepto rithms. the fun result after reading trivers, would be to show that each individual has its own algorithm , unknown to itself. recent work on mice nose neurons show the placement of the neurons are the same , but their activation is different though the smell is the same per mouse. ( Seperate from the hard wired ones, ). again the system encodes its inputs, so that it can't be read from the outside . or even the inside brain. self deception.

Reid, Kevin Slavin and I have started brainstorming about deception more. We're going to do a session at FOO Camp on it in a week and a half about it to pick the brains of some of the people there. Will let you know what we come up with. Send anything you think we should read before then.
